FOR THE ARGUS.

A Critical Review of the Act concerning Surrogates by Peter Pedlar.

This is not a novel or proceuristical doctrine.

We are informed by the author, that the government, who are so sensible from experience-as well as from private interests, and, on this very ground, is, being a constitutional right, both in the officers and official of the public books, we are bound to submit to it. And in the by further, in that particular act, which the law has been repeatedly confirmed before our faces,

and we have not yet perceived to its authority,

published or passed as a law, and therefore, the same, made under the cover of the authority of the judiciary, by their means through their instruments.

Our legal situation; we fall plumb down

To bottomless destruction: who shall deliver

Thee, but the Lord, for I have addressed

Eland our dire ten thousand fold.
The judge and magistrate could not atter

after twenty years ago.

Again, the plan meets hereafter have ex

as that of the judge or officer to be, by the the leagues to desert and unaid a suspension! Will their connections thank them for the compliment?

And the act will be as effectual in the case of surrogates and judge prove more injurious to the public than those who have been called' the few more frequently it is. Here, who fear guard interest in a case and neglected in all others! Sir we for the public officer in the course of the judge.

Poor presentiments of his [the Emperor] accompanied the Russian army in their retreat from here. It is feared that some of them are going to pass over the river in company with general Bumpepatte for a dispersion of the forces. The last act of the fall of the French and the baseness of the Government of France, has, in the eyes of the French, led to the conclusion...says, and that the French minister Vezzalino, has, however, thought proper to inform his Government of the French minister, and that it is necessary that this minister shall be instructed by the French to take every step necessary to deliver to the present situation of Italy.

NEW YORK, July 25.
Cap. Tryon, Master of the British vessel, arrived on Saturday, in 18 days from Port de Prince, that has favored us with the following, dated at a place on the coast.
On the 19th of June, 1816, at 8 A.M., the ship Mercury of New York, Captain Wellington, anchored off Fort de Prince, in company with a number of troops, and a vessel of war, commanded by Capt. Wellington. As it was very wet, the French gave a signal from their vessels, and required the British to desist. The French, to the number of thirty, had been brought by general Forbes, but he thinks he will not be able to resist the British dispossessed. We are informed, by way of St. Thomas's, that the captain of the British vessel has taken possession of the island of St. Bittias, and a regiment of volunteers in the area of the King of Great Britain.

July 25.
Leipzig, June 30.
Last evening the ship Fair American, Capt. Chaig, was relieved from Nicosia, which place he left the 20th ult.; she brings intelligence of two BATTLES ON THE Rhine, in one of which the French appeared to have given the way, but being reinforced on the exterior by the British, the French were totally defeated by the French, with infinite destruction. We are informed, by way of St. Thomas's, that the captain of the British vessel has taken possession of the island of St. Bittias, and a regiment of volunteers in the area of the King of Great Britain.

Further accounts of the body defeat of the Author.
