Armies of Italy

Sicariotes, commander-in-chief of the army of Italy, on the insurrection of the Tyrolese. Mesta, Mesta. Turcas. 36 Friderici. June 3.

I am on the point of traversing your territory, Tyrolese, and as the inhabitants of your fatherland are my own compatriots, I am determined to make them a gift of peace, an object so dear necessary to the interests of all Europe. As you are the inhabitants of a free and independent country, it is your own business which I am about to defend. The Tyrolese people are, in fact, the bravest and most illustrious of any nation on the face of the earth. You shall be enabled to continue your present state of independence, and to enjoy all the advantages of freedom.

The French army, therefore, will return to your country, and the inhabitants of your country will be the beneficiaries of the kind offices of the French nation. You shall be enabled to continue your present state of independence, and to enjoy all the advantages of freedom.

The French army, therefore, will return to your country, and the inhabitants of your country will be the beneficiaries of the kind offices of the French nation. You shall be enabled to continue your present state of independence, and to enjoy all the advantages of freedom. You will be enabled to continue your present state of independence, and to enjoy all the advantages of freedom.

In short, the French army, therefore, will return to your country, and the inhabitants of your country will be the beneficiaries of the kind offices of the French nation. You shall be enabled to continue your present state of independence, and to enjoy all the advantages of freedom.
