From the State Gazette.

Xenophon, No. III.

I have demonstrated the fallacy of the law passed by the legislature to repair, in part, the injuries of the Colleget of New-Jersey during the late war. I have pointed out its bad policy, merely as it regards the resources of the country, and I oppose the measure to be carried into effect.

I shall now make a few observations for the purpose of establishing these facts. The conduct of the legislature was, in my judgment, erroneous, and the arguments advanced in favor of the measure are, in my opinion, unfounded.

The objections I have made to the measure, and the reasons I have advanced in support of them, are based upon the principles of economy as well as the policy of the country.

The legislature has attempted to establish a college in New-Jersey, and to support it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.

The legislature has established a college in New-Jersey, and has supported it by the taxes of the state.

The measure is not only injurious to the state, but it is also contrary to the principles of economy.
INTELLIGENCE.

July 26.

The Surrey Telegraph reports that the Earl of Strafford, accompanied by the Earl of Strafford, has been received at the New Palace at Hohenlohe, and is expected to return to England immediately.

The Earl of Strafford has been received at the New Palace at Hohenlohe, and is expected to return to England immediately.

July 27.

The Commutation of the Executive Directory, with the municipal administration of the town of Paris, was announced by the Directory of the National Directory of the French republic.

I have just obtained certain proof that the English government, to relax its restrictions on the French, will permit the free exportation of wine and spirits. I have met with a number of English merchants who inform me that they have orders for large quantities of French goods, particularly wines and spirits, and that they expect to receive them shortly. They also state that the French government has sanctioned this action.

July 28.

In consequence of the French victory at Jena, and their prospects of following up their advantages over the Allies, the Court of London has decided to open negotiations for a peace treaty. The French have already shown a willingness to discuss terms, and it is expected that a treaty will be concluded within a short time.

July 29.

The French army marched to the sounds of martial music, and the cheering of the crowd. The spirit of patriotism and national pride was evident in every face. The troops marched in perfect order, and their discipline was a source of pride to the French people. The French government has announced that it will continue to support its army, and that it will not be deterred by any opposition.
CULPEPER and Cape-May Stages.

The rebels, after receiving a blow, the public is...
N O T I C E.

All persons indebted to the subscriber for goods, as agents, are requested to discharge their obligations, as above.

JENNIEZ & WESTCOTT.

June 9th.

N O T I C E.

ALL persons indebted to the subscriber for goods, are respectfully notified, that the subscriber will give credit on all accounts, but will require the full amount due within 30 days after receipt of notice. Should the subscriber be informed that an account is not forthcoming, he will take legal steps to recover the amount owed. Those who might object after being called, will have their account put into the hands of John Muir & Co., the agents of the subscriber.

DAVID BOWEN.

Philadelphia, June 29, 1856.

L A T E  N O T I C E,

ALL persons indebted to the estate of John Jones, deceased, late of Braddock and Salem, estate, and heirloom are hereby notified to make satisfaction to the executors of said estate, and heirs, for all goods furnished to them, for the settlement of all accounts which may be produced by the parties acting as sureties.

JOSEPH JONES.

APRIL 11th.

A P P E L L A N C E.

Information is hereby given that the trustees for the county of Salem are determined to purchase the time and view of the east half of the Post-House and all other parts. Any person desiring to purchase the same, may apply to the trustees, at the Post-House, at that time, and while the same is open.

Note.—Both parties will be entertained with reasonable offers of purchase, as to time, manner, etc.

IN THE COURT OF.